FATHER AND SON PLACED IN JAIL

State Trooper Arrests Paul Glass and Son William on Charge of Stealing Meat. Brought to Gettysburg After Being Held for Court.

State Trooper Campbell, attached to Troop C, at Pottsville Barracks, this morning arrested Paul Glass and William Glass, in Biglerville, on a charge of larceny. Officer Campbell was assisted in making the arrest by Constable Morrell. Both the prisoners were placed in jail in default of $300 bail.

During the last few weeks a number of petty thefts have been committed in and about Biglerville. Burgess S. Gray Bigham asked for a state officer to assist in making an investigation and Trooper Campbell, working as a plain clothes man, was detailed on the job. After several days he fixed the theft of nine pieces of meat from the smokehouse of Martin Boyer, near Biglerville, on the Glass men.

This morning, armed with a search warrant, the State officer, the Biglerville constable, and Mr. Boyer went to the Glass home where three pieces of the meat, two hams and a shoulder, were found. Mr. Boyer identified it by the peculiar way in which it had been cut and also by some private marks of his own. It is supposed that the guilty men disposed of the balance of the meat in the time intervening between the theft and the arrest.

Several of the meat hooks were dropped along the railroad between the Boyer place and the Glass home.

Charges of larceny were preferred against Paul Glass, the father, and against William Glass, the son. A hearing was held before Squire Haines in Biglerville shortly after the arrest and a plea of not guilty was made. Mr. Haines placed the amount of bail at $300 and, in default of its being given, the officers brought their two prisoners to the county jail, the trip being made in an open three-seated spring wagon of the Houck livery.

It is understood that Trooper Campbell will remain in this section for several days in an effort to get evidence which will establish the identity of the men who committed the other thefts about the town. They consisted in removing money from cash registers and other larcenies.

RECEIVER

Large Company Fails. Has Well Equipped Plant.

The Westminster Metal & Foundry Company, located in Westminster, has made application for receivers to the Carroll County courts and George H. Armacost, of the Waynesboro Metal & Foundry Co., was made receiver, with Attorney Weant, Westminster, as co-receiver.

The company has not prospered recently, it is said. A schedule of its liabilities and assets has not yet been filed but it is believed that the liabilities of the concern are much in excess of the assets.

The plant of the company consists of a grey iron foundry, machine shop, reverberating furnace, material shed, smelter, laboratory and office building.

A. V. Moore is president of the company and is said to have a controlling interest in it.

WILLIAM UNGER

He leaves his wife, and four children; also four sisters and a brother.

The funeral was held in Danville, on Wednesday.

98 YEARS OLD

Gettysburg Resident Quietly Celebrating her Birthday.

Mrs. Mary Menchey is to-day celebrating her 98th birthday at her home on South Washington street.

PRESENTS OLD WAR TIME NOTE

Ten Dollar Bill, Bearing Interest at Five Per Cent. Brought to Local Bank for Payment. Was Issued Fifty Years Ago.

At the Gettysburg National Bank there has been received one of the old war-time government notes under date of April 8, 1864 and bearing interest at five per cent. The "green-back" has an interesting history connected with it and has been submitted to money collectors for them to estimate its value.

The note came into possession of the bank when James McGuire, of Charming, presented it and asked that the institution inquire regarding the amount of interest due. The engraving on the face of the note reads that the United States will pay $10 "with 5 per cent. interest". Whether or not this interest ceased at the end of the year was the question at issue for, if it did not, about fifty years' interest at 50 cents a year was due. Inquiry at the Treasury Department revealed the fact, however, that only one year's interest could be collected and that the paper was worth only $10.50.

Mrs. McGuire, it seems, had two brothers serving in the Union Army during the Civil War and they received their pay in these interest-bearing notes. Upon their return home they gave her some of the money as a present and for these fifty years she has treasured the note as a keep-sake. Whether or not she will give it up, now that it is found to be worth little more than any other ten dollar note, is not known.

After ascertaining that the Government would give only $10.50 for it inquiry was made to learn its value with coin collectors but here, too, it was found to have no more than its face value, large quantities having been issued during war-times so that the notes are not so rare as might be surmised at first thought.

STILL HOLD GRAIN

High Price Fails to Bring in County Wheat.

The rush which was expected to follow the raising of the wheat price in Gettysburg to $1.50 has failed to materialize and only a few farmers have brought in any large quantities in order to get the price for which they were waiting. A local warehouseman said this morning:

"For several weeks many of our farmers said that they believed wheat would go to a dollar and a half and that, when it had once reached that figure, they would sell. Now that it is up to their mark, they believe that they see the prospect for still greater profits and some of them have already placed their selling price at $1.75. If it should get there, it is possible that they may then want $2.00."

"Just now the wheat market is off somewhat and I am looking for a drop. I do not believe that the present price of $1.50 will stand for long and the peace rumors which appear from time to time will naturally have a tendency to make wheat go down, for the war undoubtedly has been the big factor to throw grain up to the present high figure."

"Of course the entire matter is most uncertain and the price may stay where it is now or go higher. We know of quantities of grain held by farmers and only a few of them, comparatively, started to haul when the $1.50 price was announced."

Six Rallies to be Held in Adams County Next Week in Connection with Country-Wide Christian Endeavor Movement.

The Adams County Christian Union will have its share in the celebration of Christian Endeavor week which will be observed throughout the United States from February 7 to 14. The nation-wide celebration is to commemorate the birth of the society. The meetings in this county will be held according to the following schedule:

Monday, Feb. 8, in the First Lutheran church at New Oxford. Rev. F. E. Taylor speaker.

Tuesday, Feb. 9, St. James Lutheran church at Gettysburg. Rev. W. R. Glen, speaker. A social to which all Christian Endeavor members are invited will be held in connection with this meeting.

Wednesday, Feb. 10, Zion's Lutheran church, Arendtsville. Rev. Charles Shilke speaker.

Thursday, Feb. 11, St. John's Reformed church, McKnightstown. C. S. Reaser speaker.

Friday, Feb. 12, St. Paul's Lutheran church, Littlestown. H. B. Macrory, state secretary, speaker.

Saturday, Feb. 13, Mt. Zion Lutheran church, Goodyear. H. B. Macrory speaker.

All of the meetings will begin at 7:30 with the exception of the Tuesday night meeting at Gettysburg which will not start until eight o'clock. Delegates from the various societies in the different districts are expected to be present.

As one of the purposes in observing this Christian Endeavor week here, it is stated that an effort will be made to raise this county's subscription of $300 toward the $150,000 National Headquarters building which it is proposed to erect. This money has been pledged by the various state, county and city unions. Pennsylvania's pledge was $10,000 and, of this, Adams County's executive committee decided to raise $300 as this county's share in the great enterprise.

For thirty four years the Christian Endeavor Society of this county has been without what might rightly be called a home, their headquarters always being in rented places. The building to which Adams County will contribute is to be the Endeavor headquarters for the entire world.

GREAT MEN FROM RURAL DISTRICTS

Says State Lecturer before Institute at Hunterstown, and Mission of the Country School Exists Now as it Has in the Past.

"The day of usefulness for the little red brick school house by the side of the country road is not a thing of the past, as many persons would have you believe", said J. T. Campbell in addressing the largely attended farmers' institute in the Methodist church at Hunterstown on Wednesday evening.

"The foundations of the lives of our country's greatest men were laid in the rural districts and our country schools are continuing to furnish material for more men of equal fame. It is there that the real and lasting foundation is laid on which may afterward be constructed the imposing superstructure of the higher education. It is a mistake to expect to build the latter if the common school foundation does not proceed it." Mr. Campbell's subject was "The Farm of Life" and he gave a highly interesting lecture.

The institute opened at Hunterstown on Wednesday afternoon after a two days' session at East Berlin. Aaron I. Weidner opened the Hunterstown meeting and Edward Trostle made the address of welcome, speaking of the manner in which science had entered into agriculture as into the other professions. Mr. Campbell gave the first lecture, after making the response, and talked on the breeding of young chickens, advising the manner provided by nature as preferable to all mechanical devices.

William Patton talked on the general subject of "Lime", and Vern T. Struble told of the best location for an orchard and the manner of caring for trees. The altitude and ventilation features of the fruit orchard came in for special attention.

At the evening session Miss Isabelle Schlosser and Miss Hazel Deatrick sang a duet; Mr. Struble talked on "Does the Farmer Need to be Posted?", Miss Deatrick sang a solo and Mr. McClain, from the State Department of Agriculture, talked on "Drainage" after which Mr. Campbell's lecture on "The Farm of Life" closed the evening session.

To-day's meetings drew a good attendance from Hunterstown and the vicinity.

He had been a member of Gettysburg Lodge of Odd Fellows since 1860, though he had belonged to other lodges for ten years prior to that time.

MAY RESUME THE HEARING TUESDAY

Adjournment Taken in Brodbeck-Beales Controversy. Next Hearing in York. Testimony Taken Here on Wednesday Afternoon.

After hearing a number of witnesses Wednesday morning and afternoon the taking of testimony in the Brodbeck-Beales controversy was continued until a future date to be announced later. An impression gained circulation that Mr. Brodbeck intended to give up the fight but he denied it emphatically after Wednesday's adjournment.

It is likely that the hearings will be continued next Tuesday in York.

An attempt to show that Mr. Weikert had whiskey in his carpenter shop was unsuccessful. Mr. Weikert denying it and stating that he never had been a political worker. Mr. Wilson was questioned concerning the laying of a criminal charge against Mr. Brodbeck and said that it had been done at the instance of Mr. Beales' attorneys.

Dr. Markley took occasion to deny the implications concerning his work on election day and said that the notes which voters brought to him were requests to haul others to the polling places. In the course of his statement he said that he could get 500 persons to testify against his use of liquor, and every good citizen to swear that they would not believe his accuser, Otis Baughman, on oath.

Wilson and Tonsil stated that they marked their own tickets. The hearing almost resolved itself into a minstrel show during their appearance and at the conclusion of their testimony Attorney Ruby asked that announcement be made of the continuance, until a further date, of the taking of testimony.

CHECK GERMANS WEST OF WARSAW

Russians Claim to Have Regained Lost Ground.

COSSACKS NEAR BUDAPEST

Berlin Announces Capture of Village East of Bolimow and 4000 of Czar's Troops.

London, Feb. 4.—Fierce fighting continues in the district west of Warsaw, and the tide of victory is now flowing toward the Russians as a result of the arrival there of fresh troops.

Dispatches from Warsaw estimate the Russian reinforcements in this region at 1,000,000 men, and an official statement issued in Petrograd stated that trenches taken by the Germans in the early fighting had been recaptured.

While general interest centers in the fighting west of Warsaw, the military experts regard the news that another invasion of Hungary is in full swing as of greater importance from a strategic standpoint. The Russian general staff reports that large forces of cavalry are approaching Budapest.

The advancing Cossacks have practically separated the Austro-German forces in Bukovina from those in western Galicia.

The Russian drive against Thorn, the great German fortress on the Vistula, in East Prussia, has been resumed. After sanguinary fighting along the lower Vistula and north of that stream, the Germans have retreated to Lipno, only twenty-six miles from Thorn.

The following official statement was issued in Petrograd: "The engagements in the region of Miawa have continued favorable to our troops. On the left bank of the Vistula the battle on the roads from Borjow proceeded on Feb. 1 with considerable intensity."

"The German attack on the morning of Feb. 2, north of Borjow, was repulsed with great losses. A violent combat was begun south of Goumine, where we recaptured advance trenches which we lost on Jan. 31."

"In the Carpathians the conflict continued on Jan. 31 and Feb. 1. Our forces advanced, fighting along the broad front at Dukla Pass, as far as the lower San, having crossed the principal ridge of the mountain range in the region of Paskiska and Mezo Laborez, where we took a battery of six cannon, two mortars, a number of rapid firers and numerous prisoners. An offensive movement undertaken by the enemy southeast of Uszok Pass was repulsed with enormous losses."

The capture of 4000 Russian prisoners and six machine guns since Feb. 1, in the fighting west of Warsaw, is announced in an official report from the German general staff, issued in Berlin. The statement follows: "In Poland, north of the Vistula, cavalry onslaughts by the Russians have been repulsed, while south of the Vistula German attacks at a point east of Borjow ended with the occupation of the village of Humin (probably Cymine). Fighting for possession of Wolaszye-Lowiczka has been going on since Feb. 1. In these engagements we have taken more than 4000 prisoners and captured six machine guns."

"Russian attacks at night against the German positions near the Bzura river have been repulsed."

MAINE MEMORIAL.

Dedication Exercises to Be Held In Washington.

"Remember the Maine!" Again that famous cry will bear concrete fruit in the formal dedication of the national Maine memorial in Arlington cemetery, Washington. On Feb. 15, the seventeenth anniversary of the sinking of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor, this memorial will be formally dedicated. It consists of the original mainmast of the battleship set in a concrete foundation and resembles the turret of a warship. This foundation is a mausoleum, fourteen feet high and twenty-six feet in diameter. On the sides are panels inscribed with the names of the victims of the Maine. President Wilson, Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Rear Admiral C. D. Sigsbee, retired, commander of the old Maine, will speak at the exercises.

BLAZING RAFTS FAIL TO HARASS FRENCH

Germans Use Ancient Device in Fighting Near Albert.

London, Feb. 4.—The Germans are resorting to "fire ships" in their fighting against the allies in northern France.

They are sending burning rafts loaded with explosives adrift on the streams in an attempt to burn or blow up bridges held by the French, British and Belgian troops.

The French official statement tells of these operations on the river Ancre, which flows north and west of Albert.

In the vicinity of La Bassee there has been a return to the old style of German battering, the men being hurled forward in close formation at great sacrifice, with, British reports say, little permanent gains.

La Bassee, twelve miles south of the Belgian border, long has been a crucial point on the western front, and the British troops congregated in the neighborhood have suffered heavily.

German attacks at St. Paul, which were repulsed with severe losses, were directed against the French position in the forest of St. Mar, east of Soissons, where a heavy amount of French artillery was massed.

After a respite, severe bayonet fighting is in progress in the Argonne district, troops fighting at close quarters for possession of trenches. It is believed the German troops in the vicinity of St. Hubert, Fort De Paris and Fernay are being strongly reinforced. French airmen reported great activity on the railroads back of the German lines.

SCORES NEUTRALITY LEAGUE

British Foreign Office Gets Informal Word From United States.

London, Feb. 4.—The British foreign office has been given to understand informally that the United States government repudiates Representative Barthold's so-called neutrality league.

The dispatch refers to the National German-American league, organized at a meeting in Washington last Saturday, at which societies said to have a membership of 5,000,000 were represented.

One of the tenets of the league is that the members shall pledge themselves to vote only for candidates who will aid in eliminating all undue foreign influence from official life.

Falkenhayn's Son Killed.

Paris, Feb. 4.—Details of the death of Captain von Falkenhayn, son of the chief of the German general staff, reveal a dramatic tale. The German was in a Taube reconnoitering in the vicinity of Amiens when a French craft overtook him. An aerial duel followed, four detonations rapidly succeeding each other. One of the bullets went through the heart of Captain von Falkenhayn.

PLAN INVASION OF GREAT BRITAIN

Kaiser to Cover Landing by Sea Attack in South.

TROOPS READY TO EMBARK

Berlin Newspapers Believe Germans Will Blockade French Coast—Admiralty Issues a Warning.

London, Feb. 4.—The Exchange Telegraph company has received the following dispatch from its Copenhagen correspondent:

"Emperor William's visit to Wilhelmshaven is believed to be in connection with the warning of the German admiralty to neutral shipping that great activity may be expected off the north and west coasts of England as a result of German attempts to stop England's transportation of troops and munitions, as announced on Tuesday."

"This is interpreted in London as a prodrome to important events at sea. It is rumored that Germany will try to engage the British fleet in southern waters, while another squadron goes northward at full speed with the object of covering the landing of troops in England."

"Large contingents of troops are reported to have been mobilized at Wilhelmshaven at the time of the Scarborough raid."

It was suggested in the house of commons that the German submarines which have been playing havoc with British shipping recently might have obtained fresh supplies of fuel from a ship direct from an English port.

Gershom Stewart, a member, put before the admiralty a question as to "whether a neutral oil steamer outward bound from Manchester was not seen alongside two German submarines within the past week."

Mr. Stewart also calls on the admiralty for the name of this steamer, the shippers of the oil and the consignees, and asks whether the exportation of oil on neutral vessels will be permitted hereafter.

Kaiser May Blockade French Coast.

Berlin, Feb. 4.—The warning of the German admiralty staff concerning coming operations on the French coast, is considered by some Berlin newspapers, among them the Morgen Post, to mean that an actual blockade is to be put into effect by the Germans.

The Morgen Post, however, points out that many of the essentials of a blockade are lacking, among them being a definite description of boundaries and a warning that neutral ships must not enter the forbidden zone.

The entire German press prints the comments made by the English newspapers regarding the deeds of the German submarine U-21, which made the raid Saturday on British steamers in the Irish sea.

The announcement of the German navy staff follows:

"England intends to ship shortly to France a large number of troops and a great quantity of war material. We shall prevent this as much as possible, and we warn ordinary ships to keep away from the northwest coast of France. Trade to the North sea is recommended to go round the north coast of Scotland."

Discussing the torpedoing of the British merchantmen by German submarines, the Kreuz Zeitung, a Berlin newspaper, says:

"England and France cannot claim from us in all circumstances and without exceptions the benevolent treatment which we hitherto have accorded merchant ships at sea. Certainly the life of no civilian will be sacrificed without necessity, but as no one refrains from bombarding a fortress or places on a battlefield because civilians may thereby be killed, and as England has not hesitated to strew the North sea with mines whereby the lives of neutrals are sacrificed, so shall we not refrain from torpedoing English merchant ships, simply because the lives of a few are thereby endangered."

Austin, Tex., Feb. 4.—A joint resolution for an amendment to the state constitution, dividing Texas into three states, was introduced by Senator W. L. Hall, of Wharton county. The states would be North Texas, capital Palestine; West Texas, capital, Abilene, and South Texas, capital, Austin.

Swiss Soldiers Fire on German Airship.

ASKS EXTRADITION OF DYNAMITER

Would-be Bridge Wrecker Claims Offense is Political.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Formal application for the extradition to Canada of Werner Van Horn, charged with "attempted destruction of human life," was made at the state department by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador.

Van Horn attempted to destroy the Canadian Pacific railroad bridge over the St. Croix river, in New Brunswick, and then escaped into Maine and was arrested at Vanceboro.

Van Horn asserts that he is a German reservist and that his deed was an act of war against the enemy of his country.

The case presents some novel features, and in some respects is without precedent. In time of peace and under normal conditions, the matter would be simple, for the crime is covered in paragraph 12, article 1, of the supplementary extradition treaty of 1900 between the United States and Great Britain, negotiated by Secretary Hay and Ambassador Pauncefote.

That article adds to the list of crimes for which extradition may be demanded, included in the original treaty of 1899, the following:

"Willful and unlawful destruction or obstruction of railroads which endangers human life."

But Van Horn is reported to have set up the plea that his offense was political, and article 2 of the treaty of 1899 reads:

"A fugitive criminal shall not be surrendered if the offense in respect of which his surrender is demanded be one of a political character, or if he proves that the requisition for his surrender has in fact been made with a view to try and punish him for an offense of a political character."

So the question undoubtedly will be whether Van Horn's effort to cut a railroad through which his country's enemy receives munitions of war and reinforcements can be considered as a political offense.

Appeals to German Embassy For Aid.

Vanceboro, Me., Feb. 4.—Werner Van Horn, who attempted to blow up the railway bridge here on Tuesday, has appealed to the German ambassador at Washington, Count von Bernstorff. He told the latter that he had not been on Canadian soil, and asked for protection from extradition to Canada.

KICK ON NEW BOROUGH CODE

Norristown, Pottstown and Others Do Not Relish Changes In Methods.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 4.—Representatives of boroughs along the Schuylkill river, including Norristown and Pottstown, which operate under special acts dating from a long time ago, will probably ask to be heard before the legislature takes action on the proposed borough code.

Some of the Montgomery county boroughs are not entirely satisfied with the provisions of the code, which would make changes in methods and powers they have had for many years.

YORK SPRINGS

York Springs—Rev. L. M. Gardner, has the laugh on Father Time and does a great many things that men a quarter of a century younger do not attempt. On Saturday Mr. Gardner was out skating on Meadow Hill Lake and enjoyed himself immensely cutting circles and gliding along with the crowd of young and middle aged skaters. Whether it be preaching, working or at sport Mr. Gardner can always acquit himself well and refuses to allow his 83 years to interfere with his work or play.

The first annual banquet of the Metosm Tribe of Red Men of this place was held in the Bank Hall on Tuesday evening and was attended by the fifty two members and nearly that many guests.

Calvin Davis, of near town, had a narrow escape from death at Biglerville on Friday when he was seized with an attack of acute indigestion. In company with his brother, Samuel Davis, he had just entered the dining room of Hotel Bigler and sat down at the table when he dropped over unconscious. Dr. James Stover was in the hotel at the time and he was called in and found Mr. Davis in a very serious condition but prompt treatment brought him around and in a few hours was able to be removed to his home. Mr. Davis has almost fully recovered from his sudden illness.

Q. W. Hershey, of Pittsburgh, made a flying visit to his parents here on Sunday.

Miss Martha Lott, of near Gettysburg, is the guest of J. Harvey Neely and family for the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lerew, of Harrisburg, were the recent guests of O. F. Lerew and family.

J. L. Lerew and brother, Harry Lerew, went to York last week on a business trip.

Joel Griest returned home from New York City on Sunday evening bringing with him a handsome six cylinder, 7-passenger Hudson automobile with all of the latest improvements.

In the thirteen years that he was rural letter carrier on Route 4 from York Springs, William S. Hendricks has covered a distance of over 100,000 miles or a distance equal to girdling the earth four times.

GLASS—COMP

MANY BELGIAN EMPLOYMENT FAMILIES SEEK IN THIS COUNTRY

Stories of People Whose Homes Have Been Wrecked In European War. Hundreds Fled, Fearing That Germans Might Make Them Serve In Kaiser's Army.

EXPERIENCES told by refugees at the Belgian bureau, at 10 Bridge street, New York city, where they have sought assistance in getting work in this country, have thrown many side lights on conditions in Belgium resulting from the war. Nearly 150 refugees have appeared to the bureau and been placed. This work by the bureau, which is a permanent institution maintained on behalf of Belgians in this country, has been in line with its activities before normal emigration was arrested by the war.

The department of refuge relief has been in charge of a supervisor, who, through her knowledge of languages, has been particularly successful in this work, which has meant more than the securing of positions for applicants. A great majority of refugees arrive in this country in great mental stress and depression of spirit and require sympathetic and individual treatment.

The Bureau Bulletin tells the story as follows: "The Belgian refugee comes to the Belgian bureau helpless, but by no means hopeless, as he has unbroken confidence in his own efficiency and in his American brother's generosity, of which he has already had such substantial proof. We encourage his hope and then put him in a way to realize it. This, however, we could never accomplish were it not for the hearty co-operation of the splendidly big hearted Americans, at whose doors numbers of this crushed and heart-broken people are now timidly—oh, so timidly—knocking.

Homes and Work.

"The first forlorn little group that presented itself at our doors consisted of father, mother, baby and aunt. The aunt had been in America before and was therefore the spokesman. She spoke in French, but was so nervous that she could hardly articulate. They had fled during the bombardment of Antwerp and had walked every step of the way to the Holland border. Her brother, the father of the little family, was a bright young fellow, who had been a licensed chauffeur in Antwerp and owned his own automobile. He begged for work. He didn't care what kind, but just something to keep the wolf away from the door. We were able to place this family almost immediately, and their gratitude was touching to see.

"The next group was a father, mother, baby and grandfather. Both men were clean, respectable looking fellows, with jaws set, as if prepared for anything. Had the woman with the child in her arms been cast in plaster and exhibited at a museum she could have represented nothing but despair. It would have been unnecessary to consult the catalogue long to find this out. The husband had been a pilot in Belgium, and the wife had taken care of her own little menage, consisting of her husband, child and aged father. This family presented a more difficult problem, as they seemed so loath to be separated; but, after several unsuccessful attempts to secure them a home where they would be all together, we finally had to break to them that there was nothing left for us to do but put the old father in an institution. We then could place the rest with an English friend, who has done much in assisting us to find homes for these poor, unfortunate people. They, of course, consented, but one could see that they were just steeling themselves for one more sacrifice. Happily, however, they were not called upon to make it, as it turned out that the friends to whose

WANTS IT SPELLED "SERBIA."

London Legation Appeals to British to Substitute B For V.

The Serbian legation in London has addressed a letter to the press and public urging the adoption of the spelling "Serbian" and "Serbia" instead of "Serbian" and "Servia."

"The latter spelling," says the legation spokesman, "is highly offensive to our people, mainly because it suggests a false derivation from the Latin root meaning 'to serve.' It is a source of hidden pain to Serbians to see that some journals persist in using the corrupt forms."

The same letter requests wider publication and performance of the Serbian national hymn.

"In restaurants and public places we hear the British patriotic songs and hymns, together with those of your allies, France, Russia, Belgium and Japan, yet, alas, not that of Serbia, which is really a beautiful piece of music."

Hen Lays 3,000 Eggs.

Miss Elsie Dobbin of Caldwell, N. J., is the owner of a hen which she believes holds the world's championship for industry. The hen is fourteen years old, and recently laid its three thousandth egg. An exact record of every egg has been kept. Old Reliable is the name of the hardworking fowl.

Fido's Future.

"What if Fido were to go mad?" exclaimed the woman who wastes affection. "Don't worry," answered her husband. "That dog hasn't enough sense to be sure enough mad. The most he'll ever do is to go peevish."

The Sin of Indifference

Does war news start to pall on you? Do war maps cease to hold? Do pictures from the front now fail To thrill you as of old?

'Twas so with me and, even worse, The war seemed to annoy, Till in a picture of the slain I saw one like my boy.

The merest lad, on battlefield Among the martyred dead, With features so alike it might Have been my boy instead!

And with the tears of shame which fell Upon my child's fair face I vowed, by prayer and works, my sin Of boredom to erase.

GERMAN SOLDIERS SAVE $25,000,000 A MONTH.

The savings of the German troops, according to Post Commissioner General Stroedel of the imperial mail bureau, Dresden, are estimated at $25,000,000 a month. Although this includes the savings of officers, who receive higher salaries, it testifies to the prudence and thrift of the men in the army, whose average pay is only 14 cents a day.

"The thrift of the German troops at the front is one of the best proofs of their moral strength," says the semi-official North German Gazette. "Even when they could do so on pay days they do not live a riotous life, like Walenstein's wild bands. The present day German soldier has retained none of the old free lance habits except a fearless courage and dauntless defiance of death. Our soldiers do not carelessly destroy their own property or that of others. Even in the tumult of battle they save for the peace to come."

Post Commissioner General Stroedel of the imperial mail bureau in Dresden has given official figures concerning the thriftiness of our troops in a speech about the army postal service. A Saxon division of reserves sent to their homes in September 10,000 money orders, amounting to 391,000 marks ($97,750), and in October 20,000 orders, amounting to 800,000 marks ($200,000). On some days the payments made at one field postoffice reached to 30,000 marks ($8,750) and in one case even 100,000 marks ($27,500). At the postoffice under the jurisdiction of the chief postal authorities of Dresden 63,104 money orders were received from the front in October. On these 2,500,000 marks ($625,000) in round numbers had been paid in. In November there were 65,516 orders, amounting to 2,322,722 marks ($590,000). Frequently the money orders were for very small sums, ranging from 50 cents to $2.50, in accordance with the pay the men received, which averages 14 cents a day in wartime. It must be understood that the soldiers cannot spend the money which they get, as they obtain most things by requisition. Furthermore, the officers and noncommissioned officers, who of course receive a much higher pay, are included in this sum total.

CHINA'S HEAD WORSHIPS.

Kneels Before Altar of Heaven—Ancient Manchu Rite.

President Yuan Shih Kai appeared before the altar of heaven in Peking and revived the worship of heaven at the winter solstice, an observance neglected since the passing of the Manchu dynasty in 1911. In this the president of the republic took upon himself a function and rite which in the past always has been reserved to the emperor of China in his capacity of Tien Tsz, or Son of Heaven.

The president worshiped at the famous circular altar, the most important of all Chinese religious structures. It is located in a sacred park three miles from the palace of the emperors and is surrounded by sacred buildings. This altar formerly was regarded in China as the center of the universe.

Yuan Shih Kai submitted a bill to the Chinese administrative council last January prescribing the worship of heaven and of Confucius for the president of China, and the measure was passed by the council. This act was regarded as tantamount to establishing a state religion for China. During the deliberations of the council it was set forth that the president of the republic should worship at the Temple of Confucius and at the temple of heaven annually, as had been the custom of the Chinese emperor. The worshiping of the president before the altar of heaven appears to be a carrying out of the purposes then set forth. The president was instructed on these religious occasions to wear the robes of the high dukes designed during the Chow dynasty in the year 1122 B. C. It was then taken for granted that all the old time rites would henceforth be re-established with Confucianism as the state religion, swinging back the pendulum to where it was before 1911.

War Boosts Laundry Bills.

The effects of the war are far-reaching. Here is an instance—a certain restaurant proprietor in London situated near a large military camp has found that since the war the cost of his laundry bill has greatly increased. So he has decorated each table with a neat notice: "Customers are requested not to draw on the tablecloths. State of the seat of war will be found on all the tables in the smoke room."

Letter Perfect.

Stage Manager—"Remember, Bangs, we are depending on your baby to cry lustily in the third act. Do you think he'll do his part?" Actor Father—"He ought to. He's been rehearsing every night for months."

Only Something.

"It is extravagance to buy such dress lining, Mrs. Bargains." "It was real cheap, hubby, dear—only a dollar something a yard." "How much is 'something'? What was the price?" "It was $1.98 a yard."—New York Herald.

Alaska's White Death.

A fearful type of storm is the so called "white death" of Alaska. This is a fog in which the whole air becomes full of minute particles of ice. It is thick beyond relief, and exposure to it for any length of time in the open means certain death to human beings.

A Constant Reminder.

"I notice you have stopped calling your wife an angel." "I had to do it. It kept reminding her that she wants a pair of wings for her hat."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Taken by Surprise.

There are some hospitable creatures who are greatly disturbed if they can not meet every demand made on them, although there are cases when it is ridiculous to expect them to be able to be equal to the occasion. Recently a barn took fire on a large estate, and the firemen of the village worked hard to put out the flames. After it was all over the husband asked the fire fighters into the house to partake of coffee and whatever edibles were on hand. His wife welcomed the men with steaming cups of coffee, doughnuts and pies. Then she said apologetically, "Oh, if I had only known this was going to happen I would have had a lot of things baked up!"

DON'T NEGLECT That Sale Advertising

You are going to have a sale, you say, that should amount to a good bit over $1000 if you get good prices.

To get good prices you must have the bidders--the people with money. Those are the people who read the news papers.

They read the sale advertising to see where they may buy what they want. Your neighbors all know what you have to sell. It is the man who lives five miles away that will look to the paper to find what you offer; and two times out of three he the best bidder.

Don't let him miss seeing your ad. It may cost $1.00 or so more to advertise thoroughly than it would to do it "half-way;" but if that $1.00 gets you a single bidder the advertisement will pay for itself.

Experience here has taught us that it pays.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Warrington, an American adventurer, and James, his servant, with a parrot, the bird known as Parrot & Co., travel along the road to the landing, bound for Kangoon to cash a draft for $50000 rupees.

CHAPTER II.—Elsa Chetwood, high American girl, tourist, and Warrington come aboard the boat at the landing and, amazed at his likeness to her fiancé, Arthur Ellison, asks the purser to introduce her. Conservative English passengers are shocked at her breach of the conventionalities.

CHAPTER III.—The purser tells Elsa that Warrington, the outcast adventurer, has beaten a syndicate and sold his oil claims for $25000. Warrington puts Paul, the parrot, through his tricks for Lisa and warns her against acquaintance with unknown adventurers—himself, in fact.

CHAPTER IV.—Warrington and Elsa pass two golden days together on the river. Martha, Elsa's companion, warns her that there is gossip.

CHAPTER V.—In Kangoon Warrington banks his debts, and while settling with James in his old lodgings overhears and interferes in a row over cards in the next room.

CHAPTER VI.—Warrington finds that the row in the next room is caused by an enemy, Newell Craig, and threatens to shoot him unless he leaves town. Elsa goes for a walk with Martha, is annoyed by Craig and stabs him with a dagger. Warrington bids Elsa good-by. She does not tell him that she is to sail on the same ship for Singapore.

CHAPTER VII.—Martha writes to Arthur Ellison of the rapidly growing friendship between Elsa and the outcast American adventurer. Warrington discovers Elsa on the Singapore steamer and returns his hopeless love and his duty to protect her against himself. Elsa tells him of her engagement.

CHAPTER VIII.—Warrington avoids Elsa, who thinks he may be ill and makes inquiries, regardless of the misinterpretation of her concern. Craig is aboard, is warned by Warrington, and calls him Paul, so letting him know that his chivalry and loyalty of ten years before have gone for nothing.

CHAPTER IX.—Warrington ceases to avoid Elsa. Craig stirs up evil gossip. Elsa tells Warrington of the battle incident and he hunts up Craig, on murder bent, only to find him stretched out drunk on deck.

CHAPTER X.—Warrington turns the hose on Craig. He tells Elsa that he is a man under a cloud and to be avoided, but Elsa refuses. She gets the cut direct from society passengers.

CHAPTER XI.—At Penang Mallow, who drove Warrington from his plantation when he learned his story, comes aboard Warrington tells Elsa that Mallow and Craig both will tell that he spent money that did not belong to him over the gambling table to Craig, and asks her not to speak to him again.

CHAPTER XII.—Mallow baits Craig, who keeps his temper. At Singapore Elsa calls on her father's old friend the American consul general. Mallow also calls and relates the steamer gossip about Elsa.

CHAPTER XIII.—Warrington calls on the consul general and sends a cable to the construction company, offering to restore the stolen money if they will lift the ban. Elsa defends Warrington to the consul general, who is dubious.

CHAPTER XIV.—Elsa dines at the consul general's and meets the old English colonel who cut her on the ship. He apologizes, talks with her about conventional society rules and tells her that Warrington's real name is Paul Ellison.

CHAPTER XV.—Elsa is driven by Mallow and Craig, a Chinaman robs Warrington of his letter of credit at the hotel.

CHAPTER XVI.—Awake and brooding over the astounding knowledge that Paul Ellison is her father's brother, Elsa hears the struggle in Warrington's room and, going into the hall, finds the letter of credit where the thief in his flight has dropped it.

CHAPTER XVII.—Warrington, or Ellison, is cabled that he can come home. He looks up Mallow and Craig and soundly whips them both.

CHAPTER XVIII.—Elsa writes a letter to her fiancé, telling him what she has discovered, and one to Ellison, calling him to her, but finds that he has gone away. She goes in search of him.

CHAPTER XIX.—Paul Ellison wanders back to New York. He is re-engaged as construction engineer by the Andes Construction company, and goes home to his mother and brother.

CHAPTER XX.—Arthur Ellison confesses that it was he who robbed the construction company in the name of his brother Paul and gives up his claim to Elsa's hand. Paul's mother hears the story and asks her son's forgiveness. Elsa arrives and confesses her love for Paul.

CHAPTER XX.

He That Was Dead.

"Yes, it is I, the unlucky penny; Old Galahad, in flesh and blood and bone. I shouldn't get white over it, Arthur. It isn't worth while. I can see that you haven't changed much, unless it is that your hair is a little paler at the temples. Gray? I'll wager I've a few myself." There was a flippancy in his tone that astonished Warrington's own ears, for certainly this light mockery did not come from within. At heart he was sober enough.

To steady the thundering beat of his pulse he crossed the room, righted the chair, stacked the books and laid them on the desk. Arthur did not move save to turn his head and to follow with fascinated gaze his brother's movements.

"Now, Arthur, I've only a little while. I can see by your eyes that you are conjuring up all sorts of terrible things. But nothing is going to happen. I am going to talk to you; then I'm going away; and tomorrow it will be easy to convince yourself that you have seen only a ghost. Sit down. I'll take this chair at the left."

Arthur's hands slid from the desk; in a kind of collapse he sat down. Suddenly he laid his head upon his arms, and a great sigh sent its tremor across his shoulders. Warrington felt his heart swell. The past faded away; his wrongs became vapors. He saw only his brother, the boy he had loved so devotedly, Arty, his other self, his scholarly other self. Why blame Arthur? He, Paul, was the fool.

"Don't take it like that, Arty," he said.

The other's hand stretched out blindly toward the voice. "Ah, great God, Paul!"

"I know! Perhaps I've brooded too much." Warrington crushed the hand in his two strong ones. "The main fault was mine. I couldn't see the length of my nose. I threw a temptation in your way which none but a demigod could have resisted. That night, when I got your note telling me what you had done, I did a damnably foolish thing. I went to the club bar and drank heavily. I was wild to help you, but I couldn't see how. At two in the morning I thought I saw the way. Drunken men get strange ideas into their heads. You were the apple of the mother's eyes; I was only her son. No use denying it. She worshipped you; tolerated me. I came back to the house, packed up what I absolutely needed, and took the first train west. It all depended upon what you'd do. You let me go, Arty, old boy. I suppose you were pretty well knocked up, when you learned what I had done. And then you let things drift. It was only natural. I had opened the way for you. Mother, learning that I was a thief, restored the defalcation to save the family honor, which was your future. We were always more or less hard pressed for funds. I did not gamble, but I wasted a lot. The mother gave us an allowance of five thousand each. To this I managed to add another five and you another four. We were always borrowing from me. I never questioned what you did with it. I would to God I had! It would have saved us a lot of trouble."

The hand in his relaxed and slipped from the clasp.

"Some of these things will sound bitter, but the heart behind them isn't. So I did what I thought to be a great and glorious thing. I was sober when I reached Chicago. I saw my deed from another angle. Think of it; we could have given our joint note to mother's bank for the amount. Old Henderson would have discounted it in a second. It was too late. I went on. The few hundreds I had gave out. I've been up against it pretty hard. There were times when I envied the pariah dog. But fortune came around one day, knocked, and I let her in. I returned to make a restitution, only to learn that it had been made by you, long ago. A trick of young Elmore's. I shouldn't have come back if I could have sent the money."

Arthur raised his head and sat up. "Ah, why did you not write? Why did you not let me know where you were? God is my witness, if there is a corner of this world unsearched for you. For two years I had a man hunting for me. I believed you dead."

"Dead? Well, I was in a sense."

"You have suffered, but not as I have. Always you had before you your great, splendid, foolish sacrifice. I had nothing to buoy me up; there was only the drag of the recollection of an evil deed, and a moment of pitiful weakness. The temptation was too great, Paul."

"How did it happen?"

"How does anything like that happen? Curiosity drew me first, for at college I never played but a few games of bridge. Curiosity, desire, then the full blaze of the passion. You will never know what that is, Paul. It is stronger than love, or faith, or honor. God knows I never thought myself weak; at school I was the least impetuous of the two. Everything went and they cheated me from the start. Roulette and faro. Then I put my hand in the safe. To this day I cannot tell why. I owed nothing to those despotic thieves, Craig least of all."

"Craig. I met him over there. Pum meled him."

"I didn't act like a man. Some day a comfortable fortune would fall to the lot of each of us. But I took eight thousand, lost it, and came whining to you. You don't belong to this petty age, Paul. You ought to have been a fellow of the round table." Arthur smiled wily. "To throw your life away like that, for a brother who

Arthur stood up. "Mother, I am the guilty man. I was the thief. All these years I've let you believe that Paul had taken the money."

"Yes, yes!" she interrupted, never taking her eyes off this other son. "I heard everything behind these curtains. You were going away, Paul, without seeing me."

"What was the use of stirring up old matters? Of bringing confusion into this house?" He did not look at her. He could not tell her that he now knew what had drawn him hither, that all along he had deceived himself.

"Paul, my son, I have been a wicked woman."

"Wicked! My son, my silent, kindly, chivalric boy, will you forgive your mother? Your unnatural mother?"

He caught her before her knees touched the floor; and, ah! how hungrily her arms wound about him.

"What's the use of lying?" he cried brokenly. "My mother! I wanted to hear your voice and feel your arms. You don't know how I have always loved you. It was a long time, a very long time. Perhaps I was to be blamed. I was proud, and kept away from you. Don't cry. There, there! I can go away now, happy." Over his mother's shoulders, now moving with wasn't fit to lace your shoes! If you had written you would have learned that everything was smoothed over. The Andes people dropped the matter entirely. You loved the mother far better than I."

"Yes, it is I, the Unlucky Penny."

"And she must never know," quietly.

"Do you mean that?"

"I always mean everything I say. Arty. Can't you see the uselessness of telling her now? She has gone all these years with the belief that I am a thief. A thief, Arty, I, who never stole anything save a farmer's apples. They would have called you a defaulter; that's because you had access to the safe, whereas I had none." Arthur winced. "I don't propose to disillusion the mother. I am strong enough to go away without seeing her; and God knows how my heart yearns, and my ears and eyes and arms."

Warrington reached mechanically for the portrait in the silver frame, but Arthur stayed his hand.

"No, Paul; that is mine."

Warrington dropped his hand, puzzled. "I was not going to destroy it," ironically.

"No; but in a sense you have destroyed me. Compensation. What trifling thought most of us give that word! The law of compensation. For the corn for me, she did it for me. And one day she sees you, and that one day all that I had gained was lost, and all that you had lost was gained. The law of compensation. Sometimes we escape retribution, but never the law of compensation. Some months ago she wrote me a letter. She was always direct. It was a just letter."

A pause. Arthur gazed steadily at the portrait, while Warrington twisted his yellow beard.

"The ways of mothers are mysterious," said the latter, finally. He wondered if Arthur would confess to the blacker deed, or have it forced from him. He would wait and see. "The father and the mother weren't happy. Money. There's the wedge. It's in every life somewhere. A marriage of convenience is an unwise thing. When we were born the mother turned to us. Up to the time we were six or seven there was no distinction in her love for us. But on the day the father set his choice upon me, she set hers upon you. You'll never know how I suffered as a boy, when I saw the distance growing wider and wider with the years. Perhaps the father understood, for he was always kind and gentle to me. I expect to return to China shortly. The Andes has taken me back. Sounds like a fairy tale; eh? I shall never return here. But did you know who Elsa Chetwood was?"

"Not until that letter came."

Neither of them heard the faint gasp which came from behind the portieres dividing the study and the living room. The gasp had followed the invisible knife-thrusts of these confidences. The woman behind those portieres swayed and caught blindly at the jamb. With cruel vividness she saw in this terrible moment all that to which she had never given more than a passing thought. No reproaches; only a simple declaration of what had burned in this boy's heart. And she had almost forgotten this son. A species of paralysis laid hold of her, leaving her for the time incapable of movement.

She heard the deep voice of this other son say: "Lots of kinks in life. There is only one law that I shall lay down for you, Arty. You must give up all idea of marrying Elsa Chetwood."

"It will be easy to obey that. Are you playing with me, Paul?"

"Playing?" echoed Warrington. "Yes. Do you mean to sit there and tell me that you don't know why I shall never marry her?"

Arthur read the truth in his brother's eyes. He smiled weakly, the anger gone. "Same old blind dufer you always were. I wrote an answer to her letter. In that letter I told her . . . the truth."

"You did that?"

"I am your brother, Paul. I couldn't be a cad as well as a thief. Yes, I told her. I told her more, what you never knew. I let Craig believe that I was you, Paul. I wore your clothes, your scarfpins, your hats. In that I was a black villain. God! What a hell I lived in. . . . Ah, mother!" Arthur dropped his head upon his arms again.

"Paul, my son!"

It was Warrington's chair that toppled over. Framed in the portieres stood his mother, white-haired, pale but as beautiful as of old.

"I am sorry. I had hoped to get away without you knowing."

"Why?"

"Oh, because there wasn't any use of my coming at all. I'd passed out of your life, and I should have stayed out. Don't worry. I've got everything mapped out. There's a train at midnight."

Arthur stood up. "Mother, I am the guilty man. I was the thief. All these years I've let you believe that Paul had taken the money."

silent stabbing sword, he held out his hand to his brother. Presently, above the two bowed heads, Warrington's own rose, transfigured with happiness. The hall door opened and closed, but none of them regarded it.

By and by the mother stood away, but within arm's length. "How big and strong you have grown, Paul."

"In heart, too, mother," added Arthur. "Old Galahad!"

"You must never leave us again, Paul. Promise."

"May I always come back?"

"Always!" And she took his hand and pressed it tightly against her cheek. "Always! Ah, your poor blind mother!"

"Always to come back! . . . I am going to China in a little while, to take up the work I have always loved, the building of bridges."

"And I am going, too!" It was Elsa, at her journey's end.

Jealous love is keen of eye. There was death in Arthur's heart, but he smiled at her. After all, what was more logical than that she should appear at this moment? Why sip the cup when it might be drained at once, over with and done with?

"Elsa!" said the mother, holding Warrington's hand in closer grasp.

"Yes, mother. Ah, why did you not tell me all?"

Arthur walked to the long window that opened out upon the garden. There, for a moment, he paused, then passed from the room.

"Go to him, mother," said Elsa, wisely and with pity.

The mother hesitated, pulled by the old and the new love, by the fear that the new-found could be hers but a little while. Slowly she let Paul's hand fall, and slower still she followed Arthur's footsteps.

"I wasn't quite brave enough," he said, when she found him. "They love. And love me well, mother, for I am the broken man."

She pressed his head against her heart. "My boy!" But her glance was leveled at the amber-tinted window through which she had come.

To Warrington, Elsa was a little thinner, and of color there was none; but her eyes shone with all the splendor of the oriental stars at which he had so often gazed with mute inquiry. "Galahad!" she said, and smiled. "Well, what have you to say?"

"In God's name, what can I say but that I love you?"

"Well, say it, and stop the ache in my heart! Say it, and make me forget the weary eighteen thousand miles I have journeyed to find you! Say it, and hold me close for I am tired! . . . Listen!" she whispered, lifting her head from his shoulder.

From out the stillness of the summer night came a jarring note, the eternal protest of Rajah.

THE END.

Have Dark Hair and Look Young

Nobody can Tell when you Darken Gray, Faded Hair with Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy, and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally, and even if nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use. Too, you simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks

His "Bill."

He had spent half the winter in Washington endeavoring to get a private bill through congress, and returned to the bosom of his family a sadder and wiser man. Shortly after his arrival he was met by a friend, who greeted him warmly with: "Glad to see you back again. How about your bill?" "Bill—bill?" said the disappointed solicitor confusedly, with a dim recollection of an encounter with the hotelkeeper. "I left it unpaid."

TUMULT AS BRYAN URGES SHIP BILL

Secretary's Speech Arouses Dissent and Support.

HE PLEADS WAR EXIGENCY

Explains Ship Measure and the Colombian Treaty to National Chamber of Commerce.

Washington, Feb. 4. — Before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which began its third annual convention here, Secretary Bryan made a plea for support for the administration ship bill and ratification of the Colombian treaty.

His arguments for the ship bill brought forth loud shouts of "No, no," and "Yes, yes," from all parts of the hall.

"I am too well aware of the force of private interests," said Mr. Bryan, as he raised his hand to quell the tumult, "to expect unanimity to the proposal for government ownership of ships, no matter how much the people may wish it."

He added that it would take one more devoted to personal greed than himself to defend the course of private ships in levying the extortionate rates enforced since the declaration of war.

"I refuse to discuss how the president should exercise the authority given him in the carrying out of the law," declared the secretary. "We give the president authority on every other subject, and I shall be the last one to expect that the president should misuse authority given him in the shipping bill."

In his argument Mr. Bryan said: "The present war has shown us the disadvantages to which we are subjected when we rely upon the foreign ships to carry our merchandise.

"The interruption of trade, incident to any great war, throws a heavy burden upon the neutral nations. Steps have already been taken to largely increase our merchant marine, and the shipping bill is a still more important step toward independence on the seas. Ships under government control will serve a double purpose, one permanent in its nature and the other important in an emergency, such as now exists.

"The permanent advantage of government ships is to be found in the fact that they can establish new trade, acting as pioneers and going where private ships would be afraid to venture.

"The various departments connected with foreign trade are in full sympathy with the president in his efforts to cultivate the good will of our American neighbors. These efforts have been manifested in many ways, and in connection with our dealings with a number of countries, but I venture to call special attention to one matter in which the members of this body will, I am sure, feel a deep interest, namely, the Colombian treaty.

"For eleven years the relations between this country and Colombia have been abnormal. All the republics in Central and South America will be favorably affected by the termination of this misunderstanding.

"The pending treaty does not reopen the questions at issue in 1903. It simply deals with the situation as it exists today, and attempts to reach an honorable settlement which will be satisfactory to both nations and thus restore the friendship which so long existed between the United States and Colombia."

The secretary referred to the new bank law, briefly, as probably the greatest single step toward enlarging American foreign trade yet taken.

Closer co-operation between business men and the government was urged by John H. Fahy, president of the association, in his annual address. He suggested that many of the commercial treaties of the United States were unsuitable and that if the new federal trade commission could not perform the duties of a tariff commission, a "positive means for meeting the needs" should be found.

SHACK BLAZE KILLS NINE

Victims Were Woodmen, Housed in Isolated Forest Building.

Kane, Pa., Feb. 4.—Nine men were burned to death and six others were seriously injured in a fire which destroyed the sleeping house of the Tionesta Chemical company at Mayburg, Forest county.

Then men, mostly wanderers of whom little was known to the company, were employed in the forests as woodmen, and at night slept in the cheese cloth lined frame building erected for them.

The house was heated by gas, and it is believed increased pressure in the mains caused an explosion which set the building on fire.

The nearest town is Sheffield, about eighteen miles away, and medical aid was hours reaching the injured. Only one occupant of the building escaped uninjured.

$3500 For Carlisle, Pa.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Among appropriations postponed until next session by the house committee on public buildings was that of $250,000 for public buildings at Erie, Pa. An appropriation for $3500 for the postoffice at Carlisle, Pa., a reduction from $20,000, was favorably acted upon.

TWO DEAD IN SUICIDE PACT

"Stranded on Rocks of Love," Says Note Left by Couple.

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 4.—Describing themselves in a note as being two "shipwrecked beings, stranded on the rocks of love," Daniel Martin, who came to Scranton several days ago from Schenectady, N. Y., and a woman who has not yet been identified, committed suicide by as in a boarding house here.

Hilda Weyhart, a social worker, discovered the bodies when she went to the boarding house to let Martin know that a job had been obtained for him. There was a spark of life in the man when the doctors began to work with the pulmotor, but within a short time he was declared dead.

The woman was dead when the discovery of the love tragedy was made. A letter addressed to William Howard, of Utica, N. Y., with six pennies contained in the envelope, was found in the room. It was signed "Dan Martin." Howard was urged to remember him and to pray for him.

"SHIP TRUST" WINS SUIT

Alleged Combination Virtually Dissolved by War, Court Rules.

New York, Feb. 4.—The government's anti-trust suits against the Prince Line, the Hamburg-American line, the Lamport and Holt line and others, charging restraint of trade in connection with freight and passenger steamship business between ports of the United States and Brazil, and against the American-Asiatic Steamship company and others, whose steamships ply between New York and Asiatic ports, were dismissed by the United States district court.

In dismissing the petition against the defendants, which include a British line and two German lines, Judge Lacombe asserts that the combination complained of has been virtually dissolved as a result of the European war.

CANADA SEIZES GRAIN

Nine Cars Bound to U. S. Destined For Germany, Is Chare.

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Feb. 4.—Nine cars of grain consigned to a New York firm were seized by the Canadian government at Niagara, Ont.

Information that the grain was destined finally for a country at war with England brought about the seizure. According to information that the government had, the grain was to be sent to New York and thence shipped to a European port of one of the belligerents.

The grain was consigned by the Western Canada Milling company, of Winnipeg.

Washington, Feb. 4. — The house committee on labor authorized the return to Theodore Roosevelt of the $40,000 Nobel peace prize with which he endowed the foundation for the promotion of industrial peace, by favorably reporting a bill, which also authorizes the dissolution of the foundation.

THE KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FRUIT TAPIOCA PUDDING.

TAPIOCA is a cheap, wholesome and when properly served delicious food. It may be had in three forms—the flaked, the pearl and the granule. It is cooked much like the breakfast cereal.

Tapioca is a nutritious starch secured from the roots of a tropical plant. It makes delicious puddings, especially in combination with fruit.

With Hard Sauce.

Apple and Tapioca Pudding—Take a cupful of tapioca and soak for two hours in water enough to cover it. Have a deep bake dish and lay in it side by side apples that have been pared and cored. Then pour a cupful of boiling water over the apples, put the cover on the dish and let cook in the oven till apples are tender. Then drain the water off the fruit, leaving apples still in the baking dish, and fill the core cavities with granulated sugar. Squeeze a few drops of lemon juice on each apple. Now pour the soaked tapioca over and around the fruit. Bake for about an hour. Serve hot with hard sauce.

Served With Cream.

Peach Tapioca Pudding—Drain the sirup from a pint can of peaches and lay the fruit in a buttered baking dish. To the sirup add boiling water to make a pint. Into this stir one-half teaspoonful salt and one-third cupful of any variety of quick cooking tapioca. Cook over hot water until the tapioca is transparent. Add juice of half or whole lemon. Turn the tapioca over the fruit in the baking dish. Let bake about fifteen minutes. Serve hot with thin cream.

Piled With Meringue.

Orange Tapioca Pudding—Take two tablespoonfuls of pearl tapioca and soak in hot water to cover until the liquid is absorbed. Place the tapioca in a double boiler, with a pint of milk, a scant half cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt and cook until the tapioca is soft and transparent. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs, cook two or three minutes pour in a glass dish in the bottom of which are a couple of sliced sweet oranges. Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff meringue, with two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Flavor lightly with orange and pile up on the pudding. Set in a cool oven until the meringue rises and turns brown.

THE RETURN TO PLEATED SKIRTS.

lation or shorter length and has a high waist-line.

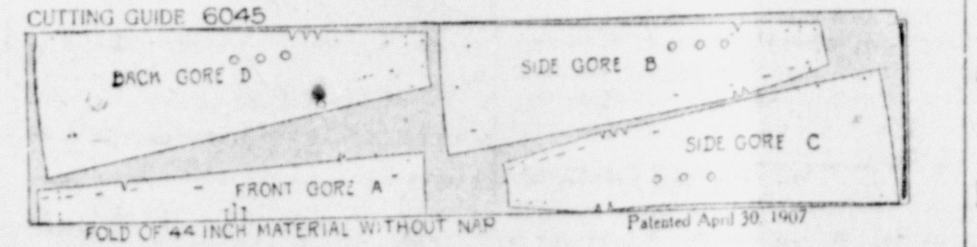

The side-pleated skirt illustrated here is not a relic of former seasons; it is an advance model for spring and shows its superiority over the old-time model that it closely resembles by a raised waist-line and full flare at the bottom. It is suitable to development in cloth, serge, gabardine, taffeta or linen. Three and one-half yards of 44-inch material are required to make the skirt. Only the front gore of the skirt is placed on a lengthwise fold when cutting. The side gore (C), although very near to the edge of the fold, is laid on a lengthwise thread, as are also the back gore and side gore (C).

There are seven gores to the skirt, and in making the design these should be arranged together according to notches. Turn under edges on slot perforations, lap folded edges to lines of small "o" perforations, stitch as illustrated, press pleats, close seams underneath. Close back seam from large "O" perforation to lower edge, finish edges above for placket. For inverted pleat at center-back, creasing on double "oo" perforations, bring folded edge to center-back; stitch and press.

Adjust a webbing or a straight strip of canvas two inches wide to position underneath upper edge of skirt for a stay, stitch upper edges together.

There are several attractive ways of finishing the skirt, but nothing is more fashionable just now than a tiny motif of braid introduced upon the front and side panels.

Pretty seven gored skirt having a pleat at each seam. It is cut in regular CUTTING GUIDE 6045

A Belgian War Romance

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

One quiet evening in the summer of 1913 a pair of young lovers stood on a bridge that crossed the river Lys, in Belgium. They were there for a parting. The young man was to leave for the coast early the next morning and thence for America. Nothing could be more peaceful than the scene about them. A young moon stood in the west. If an occasional breeze stirred the leaves on the trees they were stirred lightly. As for sound, there was only a slight gurgle beneath them as the current passed the abutment of the bridge.

"Mina," said the young man, "cheer up. It will not be long before in America I shall have saved enough money to send for you. That we may have a definite time to be reunited I promise you that one year from today, if not before, you shall receive the passage money to bring you to me."

"And I, Hans, will work and save so that if you do not succeed in gaining enough to send for me I may have enough for the journey."

When the year had passed a great change had come over Belgium. The Germans were pouring into the country from the east, the French from the south. Wilhelmina had received letters from her lover in New York that money would be sent her for her passage, but before it was dispatched the war had stopped the mails.

On the anniversary of their parting, at evening, Wilhelmina went to the bridge on which they had stood a year before. It was now a ruin, more than half of it having been destroyed. Here and there across the fields were flashes, followed by a distant roar of guns,
while searchlights sent their columns of light across the sky like the tails of nearby comets.

What should she do? Her home had been that day in the line of fire and was a ruin. Before leaving it she had snatched up her savings, and these she had with her. Standing there in the identical spot where she had stood in quiet with her lover, she resolved to go to him if possible.

There was no way of announcing her coming beforehand. She had neither writing materials nor a way to send a letter. Indeed, it was doubtful if even she could break through the line of war to reach the coast. And if she arrived at a port would she find a vessel? Nevertheless she turned her face toward Holland and set off in the dark ness.

Her adventures are a long story by itself. Fortune favoring, she reached Rotterdam in safety and there found that she had the means to buy a steerage ticket on an outgoing steamer to New York.

On the arrival of the vessel the emigrants were landed at Ellis island, and Wilhelmina among others was brought before the emigration commissioners.
There she was asked how she would be provided for in America, and when she said that she had no money she was told that she would be sent back to Holland.

Her modesty, the consciousness that she was coming to marry a man without a special bidding, had caused her to conceal what she expected. Besides, suppose Hans had changed! But the prospect of being sent back to a land running in blood, where even the little home in which she had been born and always lived had been leveled, overcame her reticence, and she told a love story that no pen, however inspired, could put on paper.

"Hans must be found!"
Such were the instructions given to a messenger, who departed on his errand.

There is a committee of Belgians in New York whose purpose it is to look after their incoming fellow countrymen. The head of the committee was found, and he in turn started a hunt for Hans.

Ever since the war had broken out
Hans had been anxious about his Wilhelmina. He had not dared to send her his savings for fear they would be lost.
Indeed, one of the troubles brought on by the war was the inability to send funds to Europe. He had written her, but without expectation that she would receive his letters. As to receiving letters from her, he had no faith in that either.

Hans was at work one afternoon
when a fellow workman came to him and told him that the boss wished to see him in the office. Hans laid down his tools and reported as directed. He found beside the boss a man, who asked him:

"Are you Hans Wichtel?"

"I am."

"There is a girl on Ellis island who came over from Belgium. She says you will marry her."

"Mina?"
"She says her name is Wilhelmina."

"Marry her! Of course I will marry her. Where can I find her?"

Hans wished to go at once to Ellis island, but suddenly remembering that a man in overalls was not in wedding costume tided himself up, then set off to join his sweetheart.

If the authorities had any doubt about Wilhelmina's story it was dissipated by the fervent embrace of the lovers. But Uncle Sam's emigrant officials take no man's promise of marriage, and there are no breaches of promise in his large family. A man went with the couple to the city hall in New York, where a license was procured. Then the pair went to the office of the Belgian committee, where the marriage ceremony was performed.

Kidney Pills are keeping up the good work. Gettysburg people are telling about it—telling of bad backs made sound again. You can believe the testimony of your own townpeople. They tell it for the benefit of you who are suffering. If your back aches, if you feel lame, sore and miserable, if the kidneys act too frequently, or passages are painful, scanty and of color, use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has helped so many of your friends and neighbors. Follow this Gettysburg citizen's advice and give Doan's a chance to do the same for you.

G. W. Bowers, carpenter, Gettysburg, says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and have found that they do me more good than any other kidney remedy.
One of the younger members of my family had weak kidneys and Doan's Kidney Pills cured her. I advise anyone who has kidney complaint to take this medicine."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Bowers had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

MAKE THE BEST COUGH REMEDY AT HOME

Cheaper Than You Can Buy

When you have a severe, stubborn cough or cold, you want the best possible medicine you can get, therefore, why not buy one which is guaranteed will be found the most satisfactory remedy ever used by you, and get your money refunded by the druggist if this city named below, whom you know to be responsible, in case it should not prove so, instead of buying one purely on the exaggerated claims of its manufacturer or on the strength of testimonials from others and run the chance of getting something worthless and wasting your money? In buying Schiffmann's Concentrated Expectorant, besides securing an absolute guarantee of its efficiency from these druggists, you also get about eight times as much excellent cough medicine as you would in buying most any of the old-fashioned, ready-made kinds, because 50 cents worth makes a whole pint when mixed at home with simply one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. This remedy positively does not contain chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic and is unlike any other cough medicine. It is pleasant to take and children are fond of it. This druggist will refund the money to any person who finds this remedy does not give perfect satisfaction, or if it is not found the very best ever used for coughs, colds, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough or hoarseness. You will be the sole judge, and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy.

Druggists everywhere are authorized to sell it under the same guarantee.
If your druggist will not keep it for you, order direct of R. J. Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn. Guaranteed here by People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.,
